

McTaggart Construction is fully committed to the promotion and implementation of effective health and safety policies and procedures throughout the business. Working collectively with employees, it is the company's intention to safeguard the health, safety and welfare of all those affected by our operations.

McTaggart policies and procedures provide a framework for the identification and management of significant risks through preventative/protective measures where such risks cannot be eliminated. In addition, we will ensure that our operations are carried out in accordance with legislation and ISO 45001, and we will strive towards achieving best practice.

The effectiveness of the health and safety management system is the subject of regular reviews by senior management. Flowing from these reviews are training programmes and the identification of measurable objectives and targets that are set to aid the continual improvement of the company's health and safety performance, in order to maintain a reputation for innovation and outstanding performance.

The application of our health and safety policies and procedures are the personal responsibility of everyone involved in the business. Employees and members of our supply chain are expected to co-operate and assist in the implementation of this policy, whilst ensuring that their own works are, so far as is reasonably practicable, carried out without risk to themselves or others. Individuals are encouraged to understand their responsibilities and assist in the implementation and continual improvement of the whole process.

The Board of Directors are fully committed to these policies and hereby endorse this policy statement.
